1 you, what materials did the FTC provide you with?

2       A I was provided with a hard drive of images
3       -- I'm sorry -- forensic images. They were drive
4       images, not -- that contained graphics.

5            I was also provided four or five other
6        graphics separately from the drive images. I was 7        provided a list of the top -- I believe it's two
8        hundred, which is actually attached to the report --
9        top two hundred -- the files that related to those.

10      That was what I was provided for this report.

11       Q       The hard drive and images, how many -- what
12       was the size of the files on the hard drive?

13       A I want to say one was a sixty gig file. I
14       don't remember off the top of my head. Sorry.

15       Q       Do you know how many files were on the hard
16       drive?

17       A There were two, two drive images.

18       Q       And within each drive image, how many files
19       were contained on them?

20       A I don't know off the top of my head.

21       Q       Do you know where the drive image came 22       from?

Johnson, Kevin

1           A       To me?

2           Q       Yeah.

3           A       The FTC.

4           Q       Do you know where the FTC obtained the 5 drive image from?

6           A       No.

7           Q       What was the -- what did the FTC tax you
8 with for your initial report?

9           A       They asked me to look at graphics, the 10 Flash objects, and certain binaries that were all
11 listed in the report.

12          Q       So the FTC identified binaries for you to 13 test?

14          A       Yes.

15          Q       Did they state why they wanted you to 16 analyze those binaries?

17          A       They told me they -- why they wanted me to 18 or why they chose those?

19          Q       Why did they choose these six binaries?

20          A       No.

21          Q       Did you test any of the other binaries on 22 that drive?

Johnson, Kevin

27

1           A       I looked at the other files there. Part of
2 my direction was, you know, analyze these and see if
3 there is anything else on there that you think you need
4 to analyze. I saw nothing else on the drive that was
5 materially different from the files I analyzed.

6           Q       When you say "looked" at the other files on 7 the system, what do you mean by look?

8           A       You mount the file system and explore it
9 just like you would with Windows Explorer. Obviously,
10 I don't use Windows Explorer to do that.

11          Q       Did you actually open other files?

12          A       Some of them, yes.

13          Q       Which files?

14          A       Off the top of my head, I don't know. Once
15 I chose not to analyze them, there was no need to look
16 any further.

17          Q       Were any limitations placed on your report
18 by the FTC?

19          A       No.

20          Q       Did you make any revisions to your initial 21 report based on comments from counsel from the FTC?

22          A       Did I make any revisions to my report, no.

1 Q Did -- in drafting your initial report, who
2 did you talk with from the FTC?

3 A Coleen and Ethan.

4 Q No one else from the FTC?

5 A Not that I recall.

6 Q Did you talk with anyone else about the 7 drafting of your initial report apart from --

8 A Absolutely not. No.

9 Q So for your initial report, the materials
10 that you relied on in reaching your conclusions were 11 only the materials listed in the report?

12 A Yes.

13 Q And that would be the graphic files that
14 you listed in your report?

15 A Right.

16 Q The Flash files listed in your report?

17 A Yes.

18 Q The Windows binaries listed in your report?

19 A Yes.

20 Q And the exhibits -- the exhibit of the 21 impressions attached to your report?

22 A Yes.

1 Q Those are all the files that you relied on?

2                   A                   Yes.

5 Q Turning now to your rebuttal report. I'll
6 give it to you. Just take a look quickly through that 7 and let me know if that is a true and correct copy of 8 your rebuttal report.

9                  A                  Yes.

10 Q What materials did you rely on in reaching
11 the conclusions in your rebuttal report?

12           A        In these, I had access to -- I guess you
13          call them rebuttal reports to my original report, the 14          Kim and Ellis reports. I had the Leggen report. I had 15          the drives still, you know, the files from the drives.
16          I can't recall anything else other than -- oh, I had a
17          document that included the HTML codes which we 18          referenced in here from Media Click. I believe that's 19          everything.

20 Q And you did have that document for your
21 initial report. Is that correct?

22                  A                  No, I did not.

1       you treated it in the manner that you would treat
2       files?

3           A       Yes.

4           Q       What -- in your -- are you familiar, in 5       your experience with forensics, generally about some of 6       the things about why it's important to maintain
7       electronic evidence in a forensic manner?

8           A       Yes.

9           Q       Why is it important?

10          A       Why is it important to maintain files in a
11       forensic manner?

12          Q       Electronic files. Just generally.

13          A       If -- I'm trying to figure out how to say
14       it because it's such a big idea. There should always 15       be an understanding of where a file is and who has 16       touched it to the point that you can control that. It's 17       never possible in any examination or forensics to say
18       this file from the moment it was created was under this
19       person's control. But to the best of that ability, you
20       want to keep that list as you deal with it.

21          Q       And why is it important to know where it's 22       been and who touched it, the file?

Johnson, Kevin

May 21, 2010

67

1           A       So you know who to ask questions of about
2       the file.

3           Q       When you say "who touched the file," would 4       that also include if a different person could touch the 5       file they could somehow change or alter the file in 6       some way? Is that possible?

7           A       Of course.

8           Q       And would any user that had the ability to 9       touch or access the files have the capacity to change
10      the file?

11           MR. ARENSEN: Are you talking about any 12      file in the universe at this point?

13           MRS. GURLAND: I guess we're talking
14      generally. I guess we can talk about specifically the 15      files that you received on the disk.

16           Q       So take the --

17           A       I would not say that any user could change
18       these files.

19           Q       Who could change --

20           A       Somebody who had knowledge of ActionScript
21       and Flash Creation and had the tools to do that.

22           Q       And had access to the file?

1           A       Yes.

2           Q       But, again, you don't know who -- you don't
3       know how big or how small the universe of people who
4       had access to that file is before you came across it.
5       Is that right?

6           A       No, ma'am.

7           Q       And so with respect to this CD -- and I
8       apologize -- the CD with banner, underscore,
9       DriveCleaner-Dc-En-Swf, that file, was there anything
10      else on that CD besides that file?

11          A       I don't recall what was on the CD off the 12      top of my head.

13          Q       So it's possible there are other files on 14      the CD besides that?

15          A       I believe there were.

16          Q       Do you know what those other files were?

17          A       The same types of graphics as within the 18      hard drive.

19          Q       So would it be a different SWF file --
20      other SWF file?

21          A       There could have been other SWF files. I
22      don't recall exactly what's on it.

1 Q And how did you select this particular one,
2 banner, underscore, DriveCleaner-Dc --

3 A This is one of the files that I was asked
4 to analyze.

5 Q And did you look at the other -- if there
6 were indeed other SWF files on the CD, do you remember
7 if you looked at them?

8 A Same way as I said earlier. I would look
9 to see if there were any material differences between 10 the files other than that was red, that was blue.

11 Q What were you looking at to see if it was 12 different? Were you looking at --

13 A I was analyzing how they loaded so if they 14 all displayed similar advertisements, I would pick. I
15 chose the one I was asked to and saw no reason to dig
16 into other ones.

17 Q So would you run them and --

18 A In the flash player.

19 Q And you would look at what appeared on the 20 screen?

21 A Yes, ma'am.

22 Q And you were talking about the Flash -- can

1 you just describe for me in a sort of layman's version.
2 When we talk about a Flash in this context of these
3 files, what does it mean?

4           A       A Flash object is a binary file that
5       contains -- can contain graphics, business logic,
6       client code, that is created using something like the 7       Adobe Design Suite, Adobe Flash, things like that.
8       There are also other tools that will create them. And 9       they are hosted on a web server and sent down to a
10      browser for display using the flash plug-in in the 11      browser in most cases. There are others.

12          Q       And when you looked at, for example, the 13       particular ad, which is the banner DriveCleaner, one
14       referenced at the bottom of page three on your February
15       22nd report, was -- how did -- was there a Flash
16       functionality in that ad?

17          A       It was a SWF file, which is a Flash object.
18          So, yeah.

19          Q       And was there a smaller box within the ad
20       that had more than one image, almost as if it were a 21       movie? Does it work like that?

22          A       The entire object contains multiple

1       graphics and the logic to animate those graphics.

2                  In this case, it proceeded to show you a
3       progress bar saying it was scanning your system. It
4       changed some of the file names telling you what file it
5       was supposed to be looking at at that moment.

6                  And then when it finished that progress
7       bar, when it filled the progress bar up completely, it
8       displayed what looks like a Windows dialogue but is
9       actually a graphic inside the Flash object that says
10      DriveCleaner found 948 dangerous files.

11                 Q       Is it -- by looking on page three, it
12       appears that the program hadn't fully run at the time
13       that you --

14                 A       This is two screenshots. One while it was 15       supposedly scanning. And the other after it had 16       finished and displayed the pop up.

17                  I guess I never noticed it in the report.
18       In the black and white version, they look like they're 19       one big graphic. But if you look at the color version
20       -- I never thought about printing -- this is the same

1           A       No.

2           Q       What assurance do you have that the
3        materials that you looked at in 2010 on this hard drive
4        were the same materials as they appeared in, like, 2005
5        and 2006? Do you have any information about that?

6           A       I have no information about that.

7           Q       So you couldn't say, one way or another,
8        whether the files, as you looked at them in 2010, were 9        the same files as existed in 2005 or 2006?

10          A       I didn't look at that. I wasn't asked to 11        look at that. No need to for what I was trying to 12        answer.

13          Q       In giving your expert opinion here, sir,
14        are you saying that it wasn't important to you whether 15        or not any of these binaries were actually ever viewed
16        by a consumer, ever?

17                    MR. ARENSEN: Objection.

18          Q       Would it be relevant to you whether or not
19        a consumer had ever even seen any of these files?

20          A       Would it be relevant to the question of

1           A       The expert report is to say what the file

4           A       Not to me.

5           Q       And you don't know, in fact whether or not
6       any consumer ever saw the binaries that you analyzed?

7           A       I have no idea who touched these files.

8           Q       Do you know whether or not these executable
9       files were ever distributed as advertisements?

10           MR. ARENSEN: Object. I don't understand

1 Q How did you select the six binaries that
2 you ran?

3 A I believe there were six -- five or six.

4 They were the ones I was provided.

5 Q And were you given any rationale about why
6 these and why not others?

7 A No.

8 Q Do you know how many binaries were on that
9 hard drive?

10 A No, not off the top of my head.

11 Q Was it like in the tens or more like in the 12 hundreds or --

13 A You're going back to the word binaries not 14 executables. All the graphic files and SWF files are 15 binary. Absolutely in the hundreds.

16 Q The executables then.

17 A With the executables, I have no idea. I
18 never counted.

19 Q How many were on the hard drive?

20 A No. Yeah.

21 Q And the first time in your February 22nd
22 report that you analyzed the binaries, what was the

Johnson, Kevin

May 21, 2010

Washington, DC

90

1       method that you followed there the first time? What
2       did you do?

3           A       The main idea here was to see if these 4       would alert on things that either did not exist or were
5       exaggerated. So I created a VMware image, which is a
6       virtual machine, running Windows XP. No patches beyond
7       what was distributed by Microsoft. I didn't install it
8       and then patch it. So it was not connected to the 9       internet. Loaded the files into it, one at a time, and 10      ran them to see what they did.

11          Q       And when -- on the fifth page of your
12       February 22nd report, the final paragraph that begins
13       to analyze each of these tools, I simply launched the 14       executable.

15               Do you see that?

16          A       Yes.

17          Q       It says this then ran the program which 18       launched the purported scan of the system.

19               Why do you call it a purported scan?

20          A       Because the results of that scan alerted on 21       things that either didn't exist or alerted in such a
22       way that didn't make any sense.

Johnson, Kevin

May 21, 2010

91

1           Q        But do you -- leaving aside the content of
2 what was reported, do you dispute that the program
3 touched files on the user's computer?

4           A       Any time you run something, it touches
5 files on the computer. So I disagree with that.

6           Q        Well, if the binaries had zero
7 functionality, then you would agree that it would not
8 touch any files on a computer?

9           A       No. If you have an executable program, it
10 touches files on the system. It's one of the things
11 we're careful of as we're doing analysis in a drive.

12              If it had zero functionality, it's not an
13 executable.

14           Q        So by its nature, an executable is a
15 program that does something?

16           A       Right.

17           Q        Okay. The something that the binaries that 18 you looked at did was to identify certain registry
19 files that we'll talk about in a minute. But is that 20 broadly the case?

21           A       Yes.

Approximately Supplemental Report

Prepared by Scott R. Ellis, EnCE, RCA

Following my deposition in connection with this case, I prepared this brief supplement to my report to address what I felt were the most outstanding issues and concerns that were raised during my deposition. Specifically, I tested the free version of Winfixer software located on the hard drive provided by the FTC and attempted to locate and test a free version of Drive Cleaner software.

Windows Issues:

I created a new Windows XP SP2 VM "Clean Install" and copied the WinFixer2005ScannerSetup_jp.exe with hash value of 720b7e2b2b607c2aaaf38d96887dc9988 file to it through the clipboard. I also copied the Microsoft SysInternals Process Monitor tool to the VM.

I then started Process Monitor and collected a sampling of system activity. This sampling demonstrates that, out of the box, there are many calls to files and registry items that are made by SVCHost (an internal Microsoft process) that are invalid. I stopped the capture and saved this file. The scan log is contains approximately 1500 pages of name not found and other problems with a clean install of Windows XP SP2.

WinFixer Free version:

For this analysis I used the following from the FTC provided media which has been remarked by myself as being of an entirely unknown and unverifiable (at this date) source with no chain of custody.

I created a new Windows XP SP2 VM and copied the WinFixer2005ScannerSetup_jp.exe 720b7e2b2b607c2aaaf38d96887dc9988 executable to it through the clipboard. I also copied the Microsoft SysInternals Process Monitor tool to the VM.

I then started and stopped the process monitor and collected a sampling of system activity as described in the previous section of this report. I then started the process monitor again and installed the afore mentioned executable. A process called UWFX5.exe launched and began scanning the registry of the VM.

The scan completed and this window popped up:

The number listed here, 138, does accurately reflect the number of problems found by the software scanner. This list is not a fabrication and the software identifies what it perceives to be problems.

The majority of the problems it listed involved invalid CLSID and PROGID entries. The purpose of a registry cleaner is to remove obsolete or unwanted items that build up in the registry over time. During the installation of Windows, many items are installed and uninstalled during the process. Registry cleaner software searches for items such as no longer needed or inaccurate entries left behind by system changes. This is known as "Software Rot" and it exists in new installations. Software rot can cause application program errors as exemplified in the Clean Install scan in attachment A.

Basic Functionality not in alignment with typical malicious "adware" products
The software presented an icon in the systray. This icon could be clicked on and offered the option to "Exit." Upon selecting this item, the software did exit and did not restart itself or fail to stop. Additionally, the software uninstalled without any issues and after a reboot the software did not reassert itself. It is a telltale action of malicious adware that you cannot uninstall it without using some sort of removal tool and that it will reinstall itself if it can.

Testing Drive Cleaner Free Setup

As discussed in my deposition, I said I would test the free version and am attempting to do so. I pulled a list of 95 executables from the FTC provided media that contained the word "cleaner." It is noteworthy here to mention that Johnson had not tested the Drive Cleaner software, free or paid versions.

I then arbitrarily selected to test DriveCleanerSetup2006.exe, with a hash of 515847bce786e14dab3ababcf934965f. Interestingly, this file had a Last Accessed date of 08/30/2009 07:48:36PM, a File Created Date of 08/30/2009 07:48:35PM, a Last Written Date of 01/04/2006 09:08:24AM, and an Entry Modified Date of 02/01/2009 10:41:05AM. This means that the file very likely changed size on 02/01/2009 which is an unexplained curiosity. Evidence should never have date stamps that show changes to the file after the files were collected. This is according to the DOJ's own best practices

I created a VM with a disabled network interface from a standard Win XP VM template that I use for creating Windows XP, SP 2 test environments. I then copied the Drive Cleaner software and Microsoft SysInternal's ProcessMon to the VM through the clipboard. I found that the version I selected was not a "Free" version that does scan only. Since each test takes two to hours to setup, I elected to be efficient with client resources at this point and halt testing. See Attachment B for the complete list.
